THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1879.

"WHATSOEVER A MAN SOWETH, THAT SHALL HE ALSO REAP."

We desire to have a candid, friendly talk with State credit Democrats in Tennessee. We do not mean to upbraid them for past mistakes nor to lecture them in a partisan spirit, nor to even boast superior knowledge and foresight by exclaiming, "we told you so." But they can plainly see their past mistakes, and we believe many of them will have the manliness to acknowledge them, and the patriotism to make reparation, as far as they can, in the future. We know very well that the Republican party is in a minority in Tennessee, and that without the aid of some who are Democrats the party is wholly unable to save the State from the maelstrom of repudiation. It will require the combined efforts of State credit men of all parties to do this, and when we call attention to the fact that the Democratic party has been steadily sowing seed which has produced a repudiation harvest, it is for the purpose of preventing the sowing of such seed in the future.

The party came into power in 1869 crying "low taxes," and in 1870 the Legislature, with the approbation of Democratic leaders, without a dissenting voice so far as we have any knowledge, provided for a tax of only two mills on the dollar. Every man with a spark of intelligence knew that that meant repudiation. It was the first seed of that kind that was sown, and now we are reaping a bountiful harvest of dishonesty. Had a State tax of six mills to the dollar been levied then, the interest on the State debt would have been met, it would not be so large by six millions as it is now, and the credit of the State would have been good as good that our debt might be easily funded in four per cent. bonds, the interest upon which might be paid with a four or five mill tax, to say nothing of the damage the commercial interests of the State has suffered from a loss of credit. The "low tax" cry was popular, but it was a fearful mistake, as will now be admitted.

Passing over various mistakes made by the Democratic party in Tennessee, for we have not space to notice all of them, we come to the great blunder perpetrated last summer, when the pirate's flag was raised by Governor Marks, when he wrote the platform upon which he was nominated. We sincerely wish that we might know that the Governor is now ashamed of that wicked production. We do not want to believe him so dangerous a man as the sentiment expressed and implied in that platform and in his first message to the Legislature. Disgraced as we feel Tennessee to be, still it would be some mitigation of our general humiliation to know that our Governor has conscience enough to make him ashamed of the part he has taken in prostituting and debauching the minds of the people who have honored him with the highest office within their gift.

But astonishing as it may seem to people outside of the State, and within our own borders also, thousands of good State credit men, swallowed the poison of his platform, and "for the good of the party" went to the ballot-box and voted for him. No man of intelligence entertained a shadow of a doubt as to the meaning of the platform, and yet papers, professing to be in favor of sustaining the credit of the State, urged his election. Now the "chickens have come home to roost," and there are not a few Democrats who curse their Governor, but their act of last summer is past remedy. Their better judgment was warped and obscured by their devotion to party, and they failed to act when they might have accomplished good. We trust that they now fully appreciate the gravity of the situation and that in the future they may avoid making similar blunders. They must assume their share of the responsibility for the present state of affairs, so mortifying to every honest Tennessean. We could name a half dozen men in the Democratic party in Tennessee, and the editors of three Democratic newspapers, who by raising their voice at the proper time last summer, in opposition to Governor Marks and his Jesuitical platform, might have defeated him, secured the election of a Legislature that would have made provisions for a satisfactory settlement of the State debt, and saved the State from the silly farce of last week and the mortifying results which have followed and will continue to follow—a proceeding that no Tennessean, with a conscience or a spark of pride, can think of without a blush. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is a declaration of Holy Writ, the truth of which has been demonstrated in a thousand ways and which applies to every phase of life. The seeds of demagogism, dishonesty, deceit, falsehood, perfidy and treachery have been sown broadcast over the State by Marks, Savage and others, and we are reaping a harvest of repudiation and dishonor that is paralyzing our energies and obstructing our progress and debauching the public mind to such an extent as to be absolutely appalling to every one who feels any interest in the welfare of the State or the reputation of the people.

We believe there are thousands of men in the Democratic party in Tennessee who see and appreciate the real situation, and who are ready to take hold and do what they can to rescue the State from the control of the unscrupulous, unprincipled demagogues who have well nigh wrought our ruin. If they do not, let them keep silent, and forever hereafter be classed with the unrighteous crew, of which Marks and Savage are the leaders.

JUDGE KEY has been interviewed by a New York Tribune reporter on the result of the late election. He said that he regarded the result as showing that a majority of the people were now in favor of absolute repudiation, but thought the public mind would assume a healthier tone before it was brought up again. He also regrets the rejection of the compromise on another account. No provision having been made for the arrears of interest, which was $4,000,000 on the 1st of January, and which is increasing at the rate of $1,200,000 a year, every day's delay only puts the settlement in a worse shape. He thinks much of the discredit for the present state of affairs is due to Andrew Johnson and Emerson Etheridge, both of whom were candidates for the Senate in 1870. Johnson claimed that the debt after nineteen years ought to be considered as paid, and Etheridge introduced a bill in the State Senate to reduce the tax from six to two mills. He also pays his respects to Marks, and says he blundered, if he was in earnest in desiring a settlement, in calling the election in the busiest time of the year. He thinks the compromise would have carried next Fall, when the farmers would have had time to leave work and vote. He says the proposition never ought to have been left to the people, and puts it down as the cowardice of Democracy that left it to them.

The Tribune closes the article by saying: "It is known that Judge Key favored the readjustment which the people have just rejected, because he considered it the least of two evils. He represents a small minority of the Democrats and an overwhelming majority of the Republicans in Tennessee, who have been obliged to make the same choice. The repudiating Democracy of that State seem to have succeeded in completely stifling the voice of those who believe in honest payment of honest debts; and the prospects of the State's creditors receiving any returns on their investment are gloomy indeed."

A bill now before the Georgia Legislature will make short work with murderers if it becomes a law. It provides that courts must drop all other business to hasten through any murder case that comes before them, and if there is no court in session the judge must call a session and at once try the accused.

Mrs. Thomas, of Philadelphia, a lady more than eighty years old, has built a neat stone church in Kane, Pa., at a cost of $20,000, and presented it to the Presbyterian congregation there. The old lady each year says the Titusville (Pa.) Herald, spends a part of her large income in building a church somewhere in the country.

The sea-serpent has been discovered once more. This time it was at Far Rockaway, L. I. It had a horse's head, but wider at the top and narrower at the bottom. It had long hair, and whiskers twenty inches long. Its ears lay back like a water hog's, and it had a mane like a horse's. It was forty feet long, moved with an eel-like motion, and it looked very perfectly like a serpent. It looked slim, it also had a pair of flippers like a seal. It was shot with four large rifles, but was not killed. When shot it uttered the most distressing cries of anguish.

But It Took Fifty Years.

Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., have established a wonderful reputation for the genuine Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills and Vermifuge. The intrinsic value of the medicines, and fifty years of hard, persistent work did it. Their success has brought on the market a flood of imitations by the name of McLane, spelled differently, but having the same pronunciation. When you buy, see that every box or vial bears the signature of Fleming Bros.
